PREFACE

I have great pleasure in presenting the lovers of Sanskrit Learning with the present work Khān-i-Khānān Abdur Rahim and contemporary Sanskrit Learning. Khān-i-Khānān was himself a Sanskrit and Hindi Poet. He not only contributed to Sanskrit and Hindi Literature but also helped and inspired many others to contribute to this Literature. Such a historical figure burning with the fire of love for the propagation of Learning is rare indeed. We have endeavoured to give a pen-picture of Khān Khānān through Sanskrit sources that have been brought to light here for the first time. The Bibliography will show these in details.

The second part of this work shows graphically how Sanskrit Learning developed during the period 1551-1650 A.D. The subject-list at once reveals that Sanskrit Learning developed during this period in all its branches immensely. India was at that time resplendent with Logicians (Naiyāyikas), Rhetoricians, Philosophers, Smārtas (Law-givers), Poets, and so on. Reasons for this have already been stated in pp. 81-88.

The Kheṭa-Kautuka is really a curious specimen of a scientific work being composed in a mixed language viz. Sanskrit-Persian. Though Khān-i-Khānān himself knew many such works in this form, unfortunately, these are rarely extant. The beauty of this work lies in the fact that though for the sake of metre, Persian words have at times been used in a slightly altered form, they do not mar the rhythmic grace of the verses. The meaning also is very clear. His obvious purpose was to popularise such works in his time both amongst Hindus and Muslims.

Works of this type, Sanskrit treatises composed by Muslim scholars and purposely written in Sanskrit-Persian, at once reveal the main aim of the authors viz. development of a Cultural unity between the Hindus and Muslims. Instances may be multiplied for showing that Hindus and Muslims in those days lived very peacefully side by side, in a really fraternal manner.

The Khān-Khānān-carita of Rudra Kavi is edited here for the first time from a single available Manuscript. Khān-Khānān's interests in Hindu Astrology will further be revealed by the passages quoted from the Jātaka-paddhaty-udāharaṇa which is also being separately edited by me in the Prācyavāṇī Sanskrit Text Series. So far known, no Sanskrit-Persian work has as yet been translated into English; the translation of the Kheta-Kautuka is probably the first book to be so translated. The inherent difficulty here is in rightly understanding both the Persian and Sanskrit Texts, particularly in metrical form, where original words are not infrequently used in a slightly or altogether altered form. The Vocabulary of Persian-Urdu words in Appendix B will, I hope, prove to be of great interest to many lovers of Oriental Learning who are interested both in Sanskrit as well as Persian, to the Linguists in particular.

Thanks are due to the authorities of the India office, Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Baroda Oriental Research Institute and other Mss. Libraries for kindly lending me their invaluable Mss. for my use. I am particularly grateful to Prof. Kishorimohan Maitra, Curator of Mss., Islamic Section, Asiatic Society, Calcutta and formerly, Head of the Dept. of Arabic and Persian in the Dayalsingh College, Lahore, for kindly helping me to unravel the meaning of some intricate Persian words.

Last but not least, our grateful thanks are due to the Government of India for very kindly bearing half the cost of publication of the present work.

KHAN-I-KHANAN ABDUR RAHIM
AND CONTEMPORARY SANSKRIT LEARNING
(1557 A.D.—1630 A.D.)

PART I.
CHAPTER I.

LIFE OF KHAN KHANAN

Nawab Khān-i-Khānān was born in Lahore in Samvat 1613 i.e. 1557 A.D. His father was Bairām Khān Khān-i-Khānān and mother the youngest daughter of Jāmā Khān Mewāti. Bairām was brought up in the court of Humāyun right from his early boyhood and gradually became a great favourite of the Emperor. Bairām proved his heroic metal in the battle of Kanauj. He greatly helped Humāyun in the restoration of his lost kingdom. Bairām's tactfulness and sound statesmanship, indomitable valour and unflinching devotion endeared him much to the Moghul rulers. Humāyun was so pleased with him that he was not only left with the charge of teaching Akbar in his boyhood but also with that of administration of his kingdom as the regent of Akbar.

Bairām Khān was very true to his undertaking and expanded the kingdom by defeating the enemies of Humāyun. But in course of time, Akbar began to interfere with his administration which led to Bairām's revolt. Bairām Khān was, as a consequence, ordered to leave the country for Mecca under the pretext of a pilgrimage. On his way to Mecca, Bairām landed at Pātan where he was assassinated by an old foe. Abdur Rahim was at that time 4 years of age. Akbar brought the widow of Bairām and young Abdur to his court and himself took the charge of the education of Abdur Rahīm. Abdur Rahīm was very intelligent and within a short period, learnt Arabic, Persian, Turki, Hindi and Sanskrit.

Through the mediation of Akbar, Abdur Rahīm was married to Māh Bānu Begum, sister of Khāne Azam. After the conquest of Gujrat, Abdur Rahim got Pātan as a Zaigir from the emperor as a token of his valour. His merits were duly recognized and Abdur was again ordered to join the fight against Mewar. For two years he stayed in Ajmere and brought about the defeat of Mewar. As a reward, Akbar gave him a higher post than Mir Arj. Soon after he was appointed Subadar of Ajmer and Fort Ranthanbhere was also kept under his charge. After some time Akbar appointed him Tutor of Prince Salim. During this time he translated the "Bakyāt Bābrī," written in Turkish, into Persian. Highly pleased at this, Akbar now presented him with the whole District of Jaunpur.

During the conquest of Gujrat, Sultan Mujaffar was made a captive. He somehow managed to escape from the prison and revolted. Though Rahim had under him a much smaller army, still on account of his superior skill, tact and valour, he defeated Mujaffar. This success brought Abdur Rahim great fame, and Akbar presented him with five thousand Mansab and gave him the post of Khān-i-Khānān, an exalted post once held by his father Bairām Khān. Soon after this, Akbar presented him with the Zaigir of Jaunpur and offered him the highest post in the Mughal Empire—the post of Vakil, that was kept long vacant since the death of Todar Mull for want of a suitable person.

In spite of the short time at his disposal, Rahim translated the "Tujke Bābrī," Autobiography of Bābar in Turkish, into Persian. He read this out to Akbar on his way back from Kashmir and Kabul. Rahīm was again sent out for the conquest of Sind. This time also he was victorious and got Multan from the Emperor as Zaigir.

Soon after Khān Khānān and Prince Murād were entrusted with the duties of checking the revolution in Ahmednagar in the Deccan ; but they fell out with each other. Khān Khānān was successful this time as well but his quarrel with the Prince became a source of torment to him. Rahīm is reported to have collected a sum of Rupees seventy-five lakhs after the conquest of Ahmednagar but this, too, brought him no joy in its train. The death of his Begum at this time made him further disconsolate. At this time Khan-Desh became a Subah ; Sultan Danyal was posted as Subadar and Khān-i-Khānān as its Dewan. Khān Khānān gave his daughter in marriage with Daniyal.

There was a revolt in the Deccan after the death of Akbar in 1605 A. D. Malik Ambar made a conquest of Aurangabad and subsequently, of Ahmadnagar. Jahangir ordered Sahzada Parvez and the Khān-Khānān to proceed in war against Malik Ambar. Parvez, however, did not pull on well with the Khān Khānān. They were defeated and Khān Khānān was made responsible for this defeat. Khān Khānān, however, put down the revolts in Kanauj and Kalpi and went again to the Deccan. This time he was accompanied by his eldest son Shāh Nawāj Khān who defeated Ambar Malik outright. Soon after Shahzada Khurm was also sent to the South. The revolts in Golkunda and Bijapur were brought under control. Khān Khānān became the Subadar of Khandesh, Berar and Ahmednagar. His grand-daughter was given in marriage with Shah Zahan. Badshah made a present of seven Thousand Mansabs on his arrival at the court.

Khān Khānān's eldest son was a confirmed drunkard and died as a consequence ; another son of Khān Khānān, too, died at this time. Khān Khānān had now to face a sworn enemy in Nur Zahan who was supporting the cause of Parvez. Khān Khānān's post was now given to Mahābat Khān. Shah Zahān and Khān Khānān revolted and Zahangir sent Parvez against them. Khān Khānān in the meantime tried to become friendly with Mahābat Khān, as a consequence of which Khān Khānān was arrested by Shah Zahān. Khān Khānān was thus a real friend of neither Parvez nor Shah Zahān. The Emperor Zahangir, however, intervened and brought about a temporary peace amongst these contending parties.

Soon Nur Zehan became displeased with Mahābat Khān as well. Mahābat Khān revolted and Khān Khānān was now entrusted with the task of bringing him under control. Mahābat Khān arrested Emperor Zahangir as well. Khān Khānān was at this time SEVENTY-TWO YEARS OLD. He died in 1686 v. s. i. e. 1630 A. D. in Delhi and as such exempted by Providence from pursuance of further unpleasant tasks.

In spite of great outwardly successes, Khān Khānān's life was not a happy one. All his four sons died during his lifetime. His stars were in the ascendent during the rule of Akbar ; bad luck for him began from the commencement of the rule of Zahangir. As a son of Bairām Khān and one who was trained in the court even from childhood, there was no other way out for him than participating in the weal and woe of his royal patrons. By temperament, he was really ill-suited for the upsurge of a royal life. He was a scholarly person and used to engage himself constantly in literary pursuits. His royal engagements and the duties of his exalted position, however, constantly drifted him otherwise. The death of his Begum and all his four sons (one son assassinated) also left him disconsolate towards the end of his life.

Khān Khānān was fabulously rich, no doubt, but at the same time, he was very well-known for his gifts. He was a very great patron of learning and like his great Master Akbar, he too, hardly discriminated between a Hindu and a Muslim. On the other hand, his great love for Sanskrit Learning and Hindī was responsible for drawing him very close to all the great Hindu poets of the age, viz. Tulsīdāsa, Sūradāsa, Matirāma, etc.

It is his literary pursuits and achievements that have made him immortal.

He was the patron of Gaṅgā, Prasiddha, Maṇḍana, Sant, Lakṣmīnārāyaṇa, Bāṇa and many other Hindu poets ; they have all acknowledged sincere and heart-felt gratitude to him. Rahim is reputed to have made a present of 36 lakhs of rupees to Ganga for composing a Chappai. Keśava composed the Jahangir-candrikā as an aid for the coaching of Alak Bahadur, son of Abdur Rahīm. Even the Barve Rāmāyaṇa of Tulasīdāsa is said to be an outcome of Rahīm's great inspiration imparted to Gosvāmin Tulāsī Dāsa.

CHAPTER II.

WORKS OF RAHIM

(Hindi and Sanskrit)

1. दोहावली (Dohāvalī). Rahīm is reputed to have to his credit a Satsai, but this has not as yet been traced.

2. नगरशोभा (Nagara-s'obhā), consisting of 142 Dohās.

3. बरवे नायिकाभेद (Barve Nāyikā-bheda). Composition in Barve was very dear to Rahīm ; Tulsīdāsa is said to have adopted the Barve Form for his composition after the Barves of Rahīm, on the instruction of Rahīm himself.*

Rahīm's love for Barve is manifest from the following couplet :—

कवित कह्यो दोहा कह्यो, तुलै न छप्पय छन्द ।

विरच्यो यहै विचार कै, यह बरवै रसकन्द ॥

Rahīm's Barves are reputed to be the best in Hindī Literature, just as Sūra's Padas, Vihārin's Dohās and Tulasī's Cauphais are the very best in Hindī Literature. Barves of Rahīm are composed in Abadhī Hindī ; Barve cannot be composed in Vraja Bhāṣā.

* See the Biography of तुलसीदास by बाबा वेणीमाधव कवि रहीम बरवै रचे, पठके मुनिवर पास ।
लाखि तेई सुन्दर छन्द में, रचना कियेउ प्रकास ॥

Though called Nāyikā-bheda, the work deals with both the heroes and heroines.

4. बरवे (Barve). The style of this work is superior to that of the Barve Nayikā-Bheda.

5. मदनष्टक (Madanāṣṭaka), composed in mixed Sanskrit and Hindī, in the Sanskrit metre Mālinī. The earliest record of this sort of mixed composition appears to be a verse by S'rikanṭha, recorded in the S'ārṅgadharapaddhati of S'ārṅgadharā, composed about 1360 A.D. (see my पद्यामृततरङ्गिणी, p.c×ci.) We quote this verse here :—

नूनं बादल¹ छाड़ खेह² पसरी³ निःश्राणशब्दः खरः
 शत्रुं पाडि लुटालि तोडि हनिसौं एवं भणन्तुद्भटाः ।
 भूठे गर्व भरामघालि सहसा रे कन्त मेरे कहे
 कण्ठे पाग निवेश जाह शरणं श्रीमल्लदेवं प्रभुम् ॥⁴

Nārāyaṇa Bhatta in his commentary on Kedāra Bhatta's Vṛtta-ratnākara (वृत्त-रत्नाकर) composed in 1602 शकाब्द i.e. 1580 A.D. gives the following example⁵ of mixed composition :—

हरनयनसमुत्थज्वाल वह्नि(?) जलाया
 रतिनयनजलोघैः खाक⁶ वाकी वहाया ।

(1) Cloud (2) Sky (3) Coming (4) See verse No. 555 of the S'ārṅgadharapaddhati, ed. by Peter Peterson, Bombay, 1888, p. 87. This verse by S'rikanṭha Paṇḍita has been quoted as an example of Bhāṣā—Citra. (5) This is included in the Madanāṣṭaka of Rahim. 6. Ashes

तदपि दहति चेतो मामकं क्या करौंगी
मदन शिरसि भूयः क्या बला आन लागी ॥

The Mādanāṣṭaka consists of eight verses of the above pattern and the Rahīm-kāvya two.

6. फुटकरपद (Phutkar Pada). It appears that Rahīm composed a work called Rasa-pañcādhyāyī, which is not available to-day. Two Padas from this work have been quoted in the Bhaktamāla.

7. शृङ्गारसौरठा (Śṅgāra-sorathā). Probably, this is a part of Rahīm's Satsai.

8. रहीम-काव्य (Rahīm-kāvya). This contains verses composed in a mixed language Hindī and

6. The date of composition of the commentary by Nārāyaṇa is given as follows :—

याति विक्रमशके द्विषड्भू (१६०२) सम्मते सितगकार्तिकशुद्धे ।

अन्यपूर्तिसुकृतं किल कुर्मो रामचन्द्रपदपूजनपुष्पम् ॥

Nārāyaṇa has quoted the above as an example of भाषासङ्कर, after having given an example of the admixture of Sanskrit with Kānyakubja-bhāṣā. He also opines with reference to the same context :—एवं गौडादिभाषासु तत्तत्सङ्करे चोदाहरणानि ज्ञेयानि । Nārāyaṇa does not mention the name of Rahīm by name as the author of the verse हरनयनसमुत्थ : etc. but he mentions it to be a composition representative of an admixture with म्लेच्छभाषा । Sanskrit. The verses are more or less detached from one another. This work exhibits a beautiful linguistic combination that is representative of the peaceful social life of Hindus and Muslims alike. For details, see the section on Rahīm as a Sanskrit Poet.

9. खेट-कौतुक (Kheta-Kautuka). This is an astrological work composed in the same form of language as in 8 above. For details, see below—Kheta-Kautuka of the Nawāb Khān Khānān.

CHAPTER III.

INFLUENCE OF SANSKRIT LITERATURE UPON RAHIM.

There is no doubt that all Hindī Poets of outstanding merit such as Sūra, Tulasī, Kes'ava, Vihārin, Senāpati, etc. were more or less indebted to Sanskrit Poets. Hindī Poets had to master Sanskrit Metrical and Rhetorical Literature for their own pursuit and naturally, they were much influenced by the Master minds of Sanskrit Literature. Rahīm was no exception to this ; he was much influenced by Sanskrit rhetorical Literature as his works Barve Nāyikā-bheda, etc. show. The influence of Sanskrit Poets upon Rahīm will be well-exhibited further from a comparative study of the parallel couplets quoted below :—

The pitiable condition of a separated lady has been delineated by Rahīm in his Dohā after the pitiable lamentations of Sītā in the As'oka Forest.

Rahīm's Dohā

रहिमन इक दिन वे रहे, बीच न सोहत हार ।
बायु जो ऐ सी बह गई, बीचन परे पहार ॥

Sanskrit Couplet

हारो नारोपितः कण्ठे मया विश्लेषभीरुणा ।

अधुना त्वावयोर्मध्ये सरित्-सागर-भूधराः ॥

(2) Rahīm censures outright a supplicant in a Dohā which is a literal paraphrase of a Sanskrit couplet :—

Dohā

रहिमन याचकता गहे, बड़े छो ह्वै जात ॥

नारायण हू को भयो, बावन आङ्गुर गात ॥

Sanskrit S'loka

याचना हि पुरुषस्य महत्त्वं नाशयत्यखिलमेव तथाहि ।

सद्य एव भगवानपि विष्णुर्वात्मनो भवति याचितुमिच्छन् ॥

(3) Rahīm advises avoidance of evil company in a Dohā after a Sanskrit s'loka :—

Dohā

रहिमन नीच प्रसंग ते, नितप्रति लाभ विकार ।

नीर चुरावै संपुटी, मारु सहत घरियार ॥

Sanskrit S'loka

सच्छिद्रनिकटे वासो न कर्तव्यः कदाचन ।

घटी पिबति पानीयं ताड्यते भल्लरी यथा ॥

(4) The Goddess of Fortune, i. e., Lakṣmī is censured for her inconstancy. A Sanskrit Poet attributes this to the old age of her husband. She, a paragon of beauty, should have been given in marriage by her father to an young man for her happy dalliance :—

Dohā

कमला थिर न रहीम कहि, यह जानत सब कोय ।
पुरुष पुरातन की बधू, क्यों न चला होय ॥

Sanskrit S'loka

यद्वदन्ति चपलेत्यपवादं नैव दूषणमिदं कमलायाः ।
दूषणं जलनिघोर्ह्यभवत्तद् यत् पुराणपुरुषाय ददौ ताम् ।

(5) The great are never bereft of greatness in weal or woe ; they exhibit the same nature at all times, just as the sun or moon, the two greatest luminaries, are red both during their rise or setting time :—

Rahīm's Couplet

यो रहीम सुख दुःख सहत, बडे लोग सहि साँति ।
उवत चन्द जिहिं भाँति सों, अथवत ताहि भाँति ॥

Sanskrit S'loka

उदये सविता रक्तो रक्तश्चास्तमने तथा ।
संपत्तौ च विपत्तौ च महतामेकरूपता ॥

(6) Rahīm in one of his Sorathes advises complete disassociation with a wicked fellow ;

friendship or enmity, with such a person is bound to bring in its wake great calamity just as a charcoal burns the hand when hot and blackens it when cold :—

Rahīm's Sorathā

ओछे को सतसङ्ग, रहिमेन तजहु अंगार ज्यात ।
तातो जारे अङ्ग, सीरे पै कारो करे ॥

Sanskrit S'lōka

दुर्जनेन समं सख्यं प्रीतिं चापि न कारयेत् ।
उष्णो दहति चाङ्गारः शीतः कृष्णयते करम् ॥

(7) In a beautiful Sanskrit verse, the sea is ridiculed for its inability to quench the thirst of a traveller for which the latter is to seek for the favour of a well :—

Rahīm's Dohā

बनि रहीम जलकूप को, लघु जिय पियत अघाय ।
उदधि वड़ाई कौन है, जगत पियासो जाय ॥

Sanskrit Verse

हेलोल्लासितकल्लोल धिक् ते सागर गर्जितम् ।
तव तीरे तृषाक्रान्तः पान्थः पृच्छति कूपिकाम् ॥

(8) Rahīm in a beautiful verse advocates supplication only to the great, the lofty ; for, people longing for water dig out the course of

of a river, though dry :—

Rahīm's Couplet

रहिमन दानि दरिद्रतर, तऊ जाँचिबे जोग ।
ज्यों सस्तिन सुखा परे, कुँआ खनावत लोग ॥

Sanskrit Verse

साधुरेवार्थिभिर्याच्यः क्षीणवित्तोऽपि सर्वदा ।
शुष्कोऽपि हि नदीमार्गः खन्यते सलिलार्थिभिः ॥

(9) Rahīm is of opinion that evil company cannot divorce one from his inner good qualities just as the sandal tree, though infested with poisonous snakes, is free from poison, i. e., is not itself poisonous :—

Rahīm's Dohā

जो रहिम उत्तम प्रकृति, का करि सकत कुसंग ।
चन्दन विष व्यापत नहीं, लपटे रहत भुजंग ॥

Sanskrit Couplet

विकृतिं नैव गच्छन्ति सङ्गदोषेण साधवः ।
प्रावेष्टितं महासर्पैश्चन्दनं न विषायते ॥

(10) Rahīm in a beautiful Dohā advises cutting up all connections with evil-doers as their associates always become entangled for crimes committed by them, e. g. it is Rāvaṇa who stole away Sītā but the Sea had to pay the penalty for it—it was tied up by Rāmacandra as a consequence of its close contact with Rāvaṇa :—

Rahīm's Dohā

वस कुसङ्ग चाहत कुसल, यह रहीम जिय सोस ।
महिमा घटो समुद्र की, रावन बस्यो परोस ।

Sanskrit Verse

दुर्वृत्तसंगतिरनर्थपरंपराया

हेतुः सतां भवति किं वचनीयमत्र ।

लङ्केश्वरो हरति दाशरथेः कलत्रम्

आप्नोति बन्धनमसौ किल सिन्धुराजः ॥

Thus, a large number of the Dohās, Sortes or Barves of Rahīm shows that Rahīm was very greatly influenced by Sanskrit Poets. Himself a Sanskrit Poet, he was undoubtedly a great admirer of Sanskrit Learning; and it is in the fitness of things that, in his own writing, a great love and admiration for Sanskrit Poets would be exhibited and his composition, too, would betray the great influence exerted by them upon him.

Rahīm's bounteous nature and mastery over Sanskrit Language are both exhibited from many stories that have passed into legends.

One runs as follows. Once Jagannātha Tris'ulin recited a verse before Rahīm purporting that an influential person is worth nothing unless he molests his enemies, renders his friends service and extends to his intimates constant hospitality. Rahīm at once replied in a Sanskrit verse meaning that when in power, a man must render sincere service to all irrespective of friends or foes ; otherwise, he is simply a worthless person :—

Jagannatha Tris'ulin's Verse

प्राप्य चलानधिकारान्, शत्रुषु मित्रेषु बन्धुवर्गेषु ।
नापकृतं नोपकृतं न सत्कृतं किं कृतं तेन ॥

Rahīm's reply

प्राप्य चलानधिकारान्, शत्रुषु मित्रेषु बन्धुवर्गेषु ।
नोपकृतं नोपकृतं नोपकृतं किं कृतं तेन ॥

Kes'avadāsa, Gaṅga, Sant, Harinātha, Tārā Kavi, Mukunda, and many other Hindu Poets showered upon Rahīm sincere praise for his great love for Indian civilization and Culture.

Translation. In order to please you, Lord Śrīkṛṣṇa, I have, uptil now, acted 84,00,000 lakhs of times in different roles before you (i.e. have undergone 84,00,000 births). If you are pleased, O Lord, kindly grant me my prayers, after scrutiny. Otherwise, tell me off and do not drag me into any such acting any further.

Rahim also wrote a Chappaya on the above context which is quoted here :—

Trans. What can I give you, the Lord of the universe, whose abode is the sea and whose house-keeper is Lakṣmī (herself). Rādhā has, (however), stolen your mind ; so you, without mind, may please accept my mind which I have (already) offered you.

Trans. Ahalyā was a stone; the army of monkeys animal by nature ; Guha a Caṇḍāla ; all of the three were acceptable to your holy feet. I am a stone in heart ; an animal with regard to worshipping you, and similar other matters ; a Cāṇḍāla in my acts. O illustrious one of the family of Raghu (Rāmacandra), (though I am a combination of all the three) why do not you come to my rescue ?

Verse 4

Trans. O Lord ! I have destroyed your all-pervasiveness by (ordaining for) pilgrimage, (Your) Oneness by my (sanction for worship of many Forms), (Your) indescribability by laudatory hymn (stuti), (Your) unintelligibility by (endorsing) meditation, (Your) absence of births by (admitting of) births ; (So) I pray for your pardon.

Cf. the following verse :—

Trans. Having noticed there varieties of trees and creepers, I went to the garden ; some gazelle-eyed damsel, on her legs, was plucking flowers. She pierced me (through the heart) with the arrows of her side-glances (shooting out from) her captivating bow-like brow. So I am always pining in the sea of illusion. O mind ! be thankful for such a pass.

Verse 6

Trans. One evening I had been to the garden when some damsel possessing (as beautiful eyes as those of) an young deer, on her legs, was plucking flowers. Having seen her in the prime of her youth, the moon-faced one, I fell into a swoon. O dear one, I cannot live without you ; listen, how can I get you ?

3. This verse is attributed to Daraf khan of Bengal ;
v. 2 of Gangā-stuti, Bṛhat-stava-kavaca-mālā by Avinas'acandra Mukhopadhyaya, 10th ed. pp. 509—510.

Rahīm's Dohāvali begins with a verse with the same idea :—

अच्युतचणतरङ्गिणि, शिव-सिरमालतीमाल ।

हरि न वनायो सुरसरी, कीजो इन्दु-भाल ॥

Trans. O rivulet flowing at the feet of Acyuta, the jasmine-garland on the forehead of Śiva (bearing the moon on his forehead), during the time of the disposal of my body, kindly give me Haraship and not Hariship [i. e. I desire you as my (loveliest) decoration on my forehead and not as one flowing by the feet].

2. MADANASTAKA*

His Madanāṣṭaka also bears a preponderating stamp of Sanskrit. In some version, the verse “दृष्ट्वा तत्र विचित्रितां तरुलतां” etc. is also included in the मदनाष्टक । The other verses in it of the same type are :—

(१)

बहति मरुति मन्दं मे^१ उठी राति^१ जागी
शशिकरकर लागे सेजको छोड़ भागी^२ ।
अहह विगतः(?) स्वामी मै^३ करं क्या अकेली^३

मदन शिरसि भूयः क्या बला आन लागी ।

* Two different versions of the Madanastaka are available.

1. V.r. रात । 2. V.r. सेल ते पैन बागी । 3. V.r. क्या कबो मैं अभागी । 4. V.r. भागी ।

3. THE KHETA KAUTUKA OF NAWAB KHAN KHANAN

The Kheta-Kautuka of Nawab Khān Khānān is an astrological work. Kheta means 'Graha' or planet, and their Kautuka or influence upon human being in fashioning their destiny is the subject-matter of the work.

In 1830 S'aka i. e., 1908 A. D., the Laksmī-Venkates'vara Press, Bombay, published the work. It is by no means a critical edition and really, full of mistakes of all sorts, e. g., the second pāda of V. 2 is metrically defective. The commentator in Hindī explains a word "Aham-buddhi" in the commentary which makes the sense as well as the metre all right. The editor appears to have ignored the importance of the commentary or in any case, has not closely verified the readings of the commentary with those of the text.

The astrologers assert that the movement of the planets on the Rās'i-Cakra clearly indicates the fate of a human being and an expert in this science can exactly foretell on calculations what is in store in future for the person in question.

There are 12 Rās'is which the planets are to traverse and their period of rotation varies a good deal ; thus, the sun is said to have traversed the whole Cakra in course of a year as he takes a month to pass through each Rās'i. Thus, the moon stays $2\frac{1}{4}$ days, Mars (Maṅgala) one and a half months, Budha 18 days, Brihaspati one year, S'ukra or Venus 28 days, S'ani or Saturn two and a half years and Rāhu and Ketu $1\frac{1}{2}$ years in each Rās'i ; and so they take 27 days, one and half years, seven months six days, twelve years, eleven months six days, thirty years, and eighteen and eighteen years respectively in passing through the whole Zōdiac. This is how they normally move but allowances have to be made for their speedy or slow movements and the periods of their stay in particular Rās'is vary accordingly.

This Rās'i-Cakra is supposed to be the ordainer of human fate. The Lagna as determined during the birth-time of a particular individual serves as the key-note to all calculations. Lagna is known as the Tanu-sthāna of the newly-born baby ; its physical development, etc., also depend upon this. The figure immediately after the the Lagna is known as the Dhana Sthāna, the third one as the Bhrātr-ssthāna and so on. These twelve Rās'is are called the Dvādas'a Sthānas or Bhāvas of the babe.

The Kheta-Kautuka contains in 99 verses the Bhāva-Phalas of the twelve Rās'is. Again, allowances must be made for varying results in accordance with the strengthening or weakening outlook of the planets. It is only natural that their influence under all circumstances cannot be just the same.

Besides, in the last 25 verses, 25 Rāja-yogas, or lucky combinations of planets have been dealt with. They point out the particular planetary situations which are bound to bring about good luck in due course. They may even forecast Kingship under extremely favourable planetary combinations.

Though the work is composed in Sanskrit, it abounds in Persian words. We rarely come across such works now-a-days but Nawab Khān Khānān tells us that it was no uncommon feature in those days; many of his predecessors wrote in a sort of mixed language—Sanskrit interspersed with Persian words:—

फारसीयपदमिलितग्रन्थाः खलु पण्डितैः कृताः पूर्वैः ।

संप्राप्य तत्पदपथं करवाणि खेटकौतुकं (?) पद्यम् । ॥२॥

We cite here a few examples :—

यदि भवति जलादुल्कल्को मौतखाने

सततमहितभाषी गुह्यस्क् स्त्रीसुखोनः ।

मुतफकिरबदामे जोहरी सोऽथ जख्मी

कमफहमनः स्याल्लागरोऽसृग्विकारैः ॥३४॥

If the planet Maṅgala or Mars is in the eighth house or Rās'i, the person in question talks rudely, suffers from venereal diseases and proves wretched from the point of view of conjugal love. He indulges in worrying for nothing but remains alert all along. Further, he suffers from sores, lacks intelligence, and becomes physically weak owing to anaemia, itches or similar diseases.

Here the word Jalādulkalkaka means Mars ; Mautakhāna means the eighth house on the Zodiac ; Jauhari an expert ; Jakhami with a wound ; Kamphaham a man dull in intellect.

तवंगरश्चात्मजसौख्ययुक् स्याद्दानाग्रणीभूँपप्रियस्सिपाही ।

सर्दारकः पाकदिलो दवीरुल्कल्को यदा याप्ति-

मकान-गः स्यात् ॥४९॥

If the planet Mercury or Budha stays in the eleventh house on the Zodiac, the person in question becomes wealthy, famous for fighting, a leader and endowed with a golden heart.

Here the Persian word Dabīrulkalka means Budha or Mercury, Yāptimakān means eleventh house, Tabaṅgar rich, Sipāhī a soldier, Sardāraka a leader, Pākadila endowed with a golden heart.

गाफिलो बहुपराक्रमयुक् स्यान्मानवः परुषवाक् च बखीलः ।

पालको भवति श्रेष्ठजनानां मुश्तरी यदि विरादरखाने ॥५३॥

If the Jupiter or Brihaspati is in the third astronomical house, the person in question tends to become idle, but exertive in nature, talks rudely, is niggardly in expenses but at the same time, cares for the maintenance of the greatest.

Here Gāphila means idle, Bakhila miser, Mus'tarī Jupiter and Birādarakhān third house (on the Zodiac).

Then we give two examples in this connection from the section on Rājayoga :—

यदा मुश्तरी कर्कट वा कमाने यदा चश्मखोरा

जमी वासमाने ।

तदा ज्योतिषी क्या लिखे क्या पढेगा हुवा बालका बादशाही

करेगा ॥१४॥

If Jupiter or Bṛhaspati be in the Karkata house or the house of wealth and S'ukra be in the tenth place, then that particular babe need not await for the decision of the astrologer (literally what would the astrologer read or write for him ?), he is bound to become a King.

यदा चश्मखोरा भवेद हृत्तखाने शशी दोस्तखाने

मिरीखोऽथ नक्त्रे ।

सुरत्(?)कमालो नरो दीनदारो गनीमप्रहन्ता जहानप्रचण्डः ॥२३॥

If the blind (rather one-eyed) planet, i. e., S'ukra or Venus be in the seventh house and the moon be in the house of the friend i. e. the fourth house and Mars be in the Makara Rās'i, then the person in question obtains fame and beauty, develops a holy temperament, destroys hostile army, and becomes very majestic.

Here the words Cas'amkhorā, i.e., blind, Hapta standing for Sapta, Dostakhānā meaning the house of the friend, Mirīkha or Mars, Surat, Kamāl, Dinadār, Ganīma and Jahān are Persian words, used freely in a work in Sanskrit—evidently, for popularising astrology to people at large.

These Rāja-Yoga verses exhibit a preponderance of Hindusthānī Words. This is probably purposed ; people with an inherent tendency to know about their future affluence are likely to appreciate these verses more in their mixed colloquial garb than otherwise.

We have a fairly big literature on the ordinations of planets upon Human Destiny passing under the names Kheta-siddhi, Kheta-Kutūhala, etc. This is an important Literature that developed with rapid strides during Muslim Rule in India. Unfortunately, modern scholars have been till now apathetic to this interesting subject ; but it is now time when some of the leading works on the subject as mentioned below be critically edited and properly studied so that we may have a real and unfailing peep into an unknown, and apparently mysterious, new world :—

1. खेट-कुतूहल by सुरजित् ; 2. खेट-कर्म by भास्कर, 3. खेट-कृति by राघव, 4. खेट-चिन्तामणि ; 5. खेट-तरङ्गिणी ; खेट-पञ्चाङ्ग ; 6. खेट-पीठमाला by आपदेव ; 7. खेट-प्लव by काशीराज ; 8. खेट-बोध by कोणेरिन् ; 2. खेट-भूषण by रामचन्द्र ; and 10. खेट-सिद्धि by दिनकरभट्ट ।

Amongst these works the Kheta-kautuka of Nawab Khān Khānān is of outstanding merit. Further details about this literature and the relative importance of the Kheta-kautuka will be found in my work Muslim Patronage to Sanskrit Learning, Vol. II. We, however, edit here only the Text, and also give the Translation of it with notes in Appendix I.

(1) The verse is composed in Gīticchandās, having 30 mātrās (12+18) in the first half and 30 mātrās in the 2nd half (12+18). The metre, as at present, is defective—there are only 17 mātrās instead of 18. “Kheṭa-kutūhalaṃ” makes the metre perfect.

(2) The metre in this verse is Bhujanga-prayāta. The 4th Pāda is defective; “bihośo” in stead of behośo would make it all right.

CHAPTER V

(1) SANSKRIT WORKS ON KHAN KHANAN

ABDUR RAHIM

(1) Jataka-Paddhaty-Udaharana

Khān Khānān was very much interested in Astronomy and Astrology as is evident from his own work "Kheṭa-kautuka." As a matter of fact, all the Muslim rulers, nobles, and chiefs took a great interest in Astrology, in particular. Nawab Khān-Khānān used to be constantly surrounded by Hindu Poets, Philosophers, Astrologers and so on. S'rīkr̥ṣṇa Daivajña was, during the life-time of Khān Khānān, the King among Astrologers and therefore, it is no wonder that he took a great interest in forecasting the future life of the son of Bairām Khān, Khān Khānān of Akbar the great. The printing of our critical edition of the Jātaka-paddhaty-udāharana i.e. the Horoscope of Khān Khānān Abdur Rahīm as prepared by S'rī Kr̥ṣṇa Daivajña after the great celebrated work the Jātaka-paddhati of S'rīpati of undying fame is now nearing completion. The wonderful achievements of S'rī Kr̥ṣṇa Daivajña in this work as well as his life-history, etc. will all be found in that work, particularly, in our Introduction to the work in English. So, they are not repeated here. Only the relevant extracts relating to the esteem in which the great Khān Khānān was held, the time, date, and place of his birth, etc. are quoted below. From these extracts it will be seen that he has been praised for his knowledge for all Indian scripts and languages. This fact has been emphasised by Rudra Kavi as well in his Nawāb-Khān—Khānān-carita (vide infra). Further, it has been clearly stated in the Jātakapaddhaty-udāharāṇa that the Khān Khānān was born in Lahore in the S'aka year 1478 i. e. Vikram Saṃvat 1623 or 1556 A.D. in Lagna Mithuna on Monday, the Full-moon night in the month of Agrahāyaṇa when the evening had set in and night had advanced by 2 Ghatīs 55 Pals. Minute details have been recorded here in order that accurate mathematical calculations may be facilitated.

(2) NAWAB-KHAN-KHANAN-CARITAM BY RUDRA

KAVI

Apart from the very interesting work partly described above, there is another complete work on the life of Nawāb Khān Khānān called Nawāb Khān-Khānān-carita by Rudra Kavi. Unfortunately only one Ms. of this very fascinating work is available. It is now preserved in the Common Wealth Relations office Library, London, Manuscript No. 7304, Buhler 70B. As the work is being critically edited here for the first time, we consider it necessary to record a description of the Ms. here.

The Ms. is written on European paper; Size 11" in. by 3 $\frac{7}{8}$ " in.; written in Devanāgarī script in the nineteenth century; eight lines in a page.

Keith is absolutely wrong when he says (India Office Catalogue of Sanskrit Mss., Vol. 2, p. 1187) that the Nabāb-Khān-Khānān-carita is a panegyric of Emperor Jahangir. Nawab-Khān-Khānān survived Akbar (died 1605 A. D.) and was long-lived. He died in 1930 A. D. while this work was composed in 1609 A. D. The adjectives सर्वलिपिषु सर्वदेशभाषासु संज्ञासु कुशलः, the verse वीरश्रीजहंगीरसाहे मदनप्रौढप्रतापोदय—क्षुभ्यदतया सानन्दया भूयते etc., particularly the very use of the Title Khān Khānān throughout the work are absolutely meaningless except with reference to Nawāb Khān Khānān Abdur Rahīm. This will be absolutely clear from the description of the work given below. Further, the Jahangir-charita by Rudra preserved as Ms. in Baroda Oriental Institute is a different work altogether. (1)

There are two other Mss. of the works of

(1) For details about this work, see my work Muslim Patronage to Sanskrit Learning, Vol. 2, and Rudra Kavi and his eulogy of Muslim Rulers.

Rudra Kavi in the India office Library, viz. No. 7303, Buhler 70C, viz. the Kīrti-samullāsa being a panegyric of Sultan Khurram, son of Jahangir, and No. 7089, Buhler 70A, viz. the Dānasāha-carita, a eulogy of Akbar's son Dāniyal. The scribe of these two Mss. as well as of the above-mentioned Khān-Khānān-carita has copied the work very corruptly. This confusion was particularly due to the fact that the same or similar verses are found in all the three Mss. only with the alteration of a few words or letters here and there to suit the metre in particular.

Rudra has to his credit, besides the Dānasāha-carita, Kīrti-Samullāsa, Nawāb-Khān-Khānān-carita and Jahangir-carita, a bigger work called the Rāstraudha-vamśā-Kāvya (Ms. No. 1052, p. 1036 of the catalogue, Gaekwad's Oriental Series, No. CXIV). The work is dated 1518 Śaka or Samvat 1745 i. e. 1596 A.D. It has also been edited in Gaekwad's Oriental Series as Vol. No. 5 Bombay, 1917.

So this work was composed thirteen years earlier (during the rule of Akbar) by Rudra Kavi than the Nawāb-Khān-Khānān-carita which is dated 1909 A. D. and was composed during the reign of Jahangir. This work was composed at the instance of Nārāyaṇa Shāh, father of Pratāpa Sāha. This work contains some verses that were again used by Rudra in his later works.

The Nawāb-Khān-Khānān-carita is a historical poem, composed at the instance of Pratāp Sāha, who was the ruler Sālāsāila and Mayūra Parvata, a strategic region between two dominions under Akbar's control. He had a treaty with the Mughal rulers and in any case desired to please the Mughal Royal family by having panegyrical poems composed in their honour. As a result, the above-mentioned four works, viz. Kīrti-samullāsa, Dānasāha-carita, Jahāngīr-carita and Nawāb-Khān-Khānān-carita were composed. Nawāb Khān Khānān was not a member of the Royal Family ; but he was brought up by Emperor Akbar and used to live like a Nawab and was held in a high esteem by the Emperor himself.

Though Rudra Kavi dealt with several persons in these works, still, there is only one introductory verse, viz.

शाहाकव्वरसार्वभौमतनयश्रीदानशाहोत्तम-
स्फूर्यन्चित्रचरित्ररत्ननिचयैर्भूमण्डलीमण्डनैः ।
शालाशैलमयूरपर्वतमहीपालप्रतापाज्ञया
रम्यं रुद्रकवीश्वरो वितनुते वाग्गुम्फमेनं नवम् ॥

The poet has, however, repeated the names of Dāniyāl, Khuram, Khān-Khānān, etc, in the colophons. The purpose of the composition of the works has been clearly stated by the poet in the first verse of the fourth ullāsa of the Khān-Khānān-carita wherein he asks for the Royal patronage of the Muslim rulers for his local Chief, "Why should not Pratāpa be an object of your favour—Pratāpa, who is your protege, is at the height of his joy on hearing some good news about you and though living far off, still, constantly praises you." The 2nd verse is also composed in the same strain—"Khāna Khānān, formerly you used to look upon Pratāpa Sāha as your son; further, he is greatly indebted to Akbar S'āha and is most gratified for your very kind behaviour; so you should deal with him in a manner that befits him."

Rudra Kavi was a Poet of high order. In the present work, he was much handicapped; firstly he had to compose poems on order; secondly, for the members of the same Royal family. He entertained a high opinion about Khān Khānān; so this work has been a very welcome addition to our knowledge about a great poet who flourished during Muslim rule in India. As the subject-matter of the above-mentioned works is about the same, some verses occur in all the three works with occasional changes here and there. "Dānasāha" and "Khāna-khāna" have metrically the same characteristics and therefore, with regard to these two names, he simply substituted one word for the other mutatis mutandis. For insertion of the word Khurm, in the text he had to change the Text a little.

The poet has used choice words for expression of thoughts. As for example, in ullāsa 3, verse 4, he has used the words in such a way that if and when "Ma"s used in the verse are changed into "Ha"s, the meanings of the words are completely reversed, and the rival kings are extremely ridiculed or censured. The poet says in this verse—"O King ! you and your enemy are almost the same, the difference being only that of Ma and Ha ; the "Ma"s with reference to you should be rendered into "Ha"s with regard to your enemies." तत्र मोहो विशेषः
"Thus the words "Manyate," "Namyate" etc., when applied with regard to the enemies of the king, will mean "Hanyate," "Nahyate" etc., i. e. are killed, fettered, etc. Again, the use of three "Tari"s in every metrical foot in verse two of the first Ullāsa one has added to the graceful diction of the verse.

Though Khān Khānān was a great Hero and a person of hallowed memory, still few historical events have been referred to in the Nawab Khān-Khānān-carita. In 4. 4., however it has been mentioned that Khān Khānān's two sons, whose names are used rather in a twisted form for the sake of metre and described as "Ambar-S'ambara-Madana,"¹ are credited with the conquest of Ambar. The following verse also refers to the conquest of Ambar by them, to the great joy of the inhabitants of the Deccan.

Khān Khānān has, however, been profusely praised for his manifold qualities—heroism, charity, magnanimity, strong determination, etc. In verse one of the second Ullāsa, he has been compared with Kalpadruma, Cintāmaṇi, Kāma, Vikramāditya and Bhojarāja.

1. See Chap. I, p. 7 The demon S'ambara was killed by Madana, son of Viṣṇu. The king of Ambar here has been compared with demon S'ambara and therefore, Khān Khānān himself with Lord Viṣṇu. Consequently, the two sons are also said to have been as beautiful as Cupid himself.

PART II

CHAPTER I

KHAN KHANAN AND CONTEMPORARY SANSKRIT LITERATURE

(1551-1640)

The second volume of our Series "Contributions of Muslims to Sanskrit Literature" dealing with the life and literary activities of Khān Khānān Abdur Rahīm could have really ended with our Part I above. But in that case the real background that contributes to the proper make-up of Khān-Khānān as a Great Man and Sanskrit Poet-Astrologer remains unexplored. In order to understand this properly, we must properly investigate into the Spirit of his Age, and the conditions of the country when he flourished.

Abdur Rahīm was the son of the Khān Khānān of Bādshāh Humāyun, a highly cultured and learned Ruler who considered his Library his greatest asset and died as a consequence of his fall from the stairs of the same. Regarding his magnanimity, liberal and friendly attitude to, and behaviour with, the Hindus, we quote here only one instance. The Mughal rulers of Delhi were the hereditary friends of the Vaghela rulers of Rewā in Madhya Pradeśa. Bābar was very intimate with Vīrasimha, Humāyun a great friend of Vīrabhānu and Akbar the most intimate friend of Rāmacandra who made a present even of his court-singer Tānasena to the Emperor of Delhi. Now, when a grand-son, viz., Vīrabhadra, (who also subsequently proved to be a very great patron of Sanskrit Learning¹ and in whose honour the great poet Mīmāṃsaka Padmanābha Miśra composed the Vīrabhadra-Campū²) was born to Vīrabhānu, Humāyun's joy knew no bounds. He felt as though a grandson was born to him. He expressly said so in his Royal Letter addressed to the King of Rewā Vīrabhānu, as will be found from the chronicles of a Hindu, not a court-Poet enjoying patronage from Delhi, viz. Mādhava's Vīrabhānūdaya-Kāvya, Chapter X,

1. He was also the author of a commentary on the Kāmasūtra of Vātsyāyana, called Kandarpa-cūḍamāṇi.

2. Critically edited by the present author in the Pracyavani Sanskrit Historical Series, as Vol. III.

The above instance, amongst many others, should serve as an eye-opener to all who have long been misled by the campaigns of interested persons or of those who know or care little to know about the real state of friendship that existed between the Hindus and Muslims. They totally forget that it was the Age enjoying the fruits of the august preachings of Kabir (1440-1510), Nānak (1470-1540), Caitanya Mahāprabhu (1485-1533), Vallabha Ācārya (1473-1531), amongst some other great Saints of India.

Emperor Akbar was the great son of a great Father and not only lived up to the ideals of his father but fostered into all Indians, members of all castes and creeds, the greatest ideals of mutual co-operation, friendship and love. He was the great propounder of the Dil Elahi Philosophy, and a great seeker after Truth. He meted out equal treatment to Hindus and Muslims and was really most ably assisted by Hindus. Todar Mull was his Finance Minister and Mān Singh his great General. Todar Mull himself was a Sanskrit Author and used to patronise a large number of Sanskrit scholars headed by Nīlakaṇṭha, compiler of the Todarānanda. Eulogies of Akbar in a large number by Hindu Sanskrit Poets and other Hindu scholars have already been published in my Muslim Patronage to Sanskrit Learning Part I and many more are being added in the second volume of the same series, soon to be published with the financial assistance of the Government of India. A classical example in this regard is the Stuti-mālikā of Akbarīya-Kālidāsa, the most favourite Poet of Akbar, soon to be published in the above-mentioned volume.

The noble Traditions of the family were kept up by Jahangir and Shah Zahan as well. Unadulterated praise has been showered upon Jahangir by Rudra Kavi in his Jahangir-carita and by the authors of the Virudāvalī, the critical editions of which by the present writer will soon see the light of the day. It was Shah Jehan's Court-Poet Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja, the greatest Sanskrit Rhetorician of all Ages, the author of the Rasa-Gaṅgādhara, who declared openly that he recognised only two Gods, viz., Dillīśvara or Jagadīśvara, i.e. Ruler of Delhi or the Ordainer of the world and none else¹; and he could supplicate to them alone. He also expressed with no mean joy genuine feelings when he said that with greatest joy he passed his youthful days in the court of Delhi²:—

दिल्लीवल्लभपाणिपल्लवतले नीतं नवीनं वयः ।

How very fond this Emperor Shah Zehan was of the Brahman Pandits, will be best known from what Poet Vamśīdhara said with reference to his Queen. Jagannātha Paṇḍitarāja, the most favourite Poet of Shāh Zehan, the greatest Sanskrit rhetorician of all ages, was naturally a great favourite of the Emperor. But Vamśīdhara, his Consort's favourite, once retorted Jagannātha in an open Session of the Durbar by saying that he (Jagannātha), as the conveyance of Śiva (i. e. the Emperor) could do little harm to the favourite conveyance of Durgā (or the Queen)—the Lion, i. e. Vamśīdhara himself. That these Hindu Poets had free access to the Queens is a fact that speaks volumes about the great confidence the Mughal rulers had in them and the great esteem of the rulers for the Pandits:—

दिङ् नागाः प्रतिपेदिरे प्रथमतो जात्यैव जेतव्यतां
 सम्भाव्यस्फुट-विक्रमोऽथ वृषभो गौरेव गौरीपतेः ।
 विक्रान्तेर्निकषं करोतु कतमं नाम त्रिलोकीतले

(V. 201. p. 29 of my edition of the Padyā-mṛita-taraṅgiṇī by Hari Bhāskara composed in 1674 A. D.).

The period 1551-1650 covers the latest part of the rule of Humāyun, and ends with the 23rd regnal year of Shāh Zehan (1628-1658 A.D.) We have purposely extended the contempo-aneous period of the Khān Khānān (1557-1630 A. D.) by six years earlier than the date of his birth and 20 years later than that of his death because during these years many of the Senior and Junior contemporaries of Abdur Rahīm must have been shining resplendently in the Sanskrit Literary Horizon. Nor is it easy to say for certain when a particular poet or author was born or died. So we have extended the period of our discussion by 26 years for the sake of accuracy in particular.

Everybody will agree with us that it is very difficult to ascertain the dates of Sanskrit Authors but I have solid proofs about the dates of the Authors and works mentioned in the following pages.

Unfortunately we have been taught from our College days that Sanskrit Literature never flourished during Muslim Rule in India. Some are of opinion that it went to sleep during this period. In our prescribed courses for University and Competitive Examinations, the period of the History of Sanskrit Literature is limited to the 12th Century A. D. It is now time to react against this, for nothing can be more damaging as well as ill-founded than the above-mentioned conception. It is with this purpose that we include in the following pages, a record of the Advancement of Sanskrit Learning during some part of the Mughal rule in India. Full details about these works will be dealt with in my comprehensive volume—History of the Advancement of Sanskrit Learning during Muslim Rule in India.

Sanskrit Learning during 1551-1650 A. D.
